TEXT : UNEMPLOYMENT AND JOB HUNTING

It can take a long time to find a right job, but it doesn't have to take a long if you know how and where to look. Here are some tips to help you with your job search.

- Check the classified ads in your local newspaper every morning. Look for jobposting on bulletin board in libraries, community centers, supermarkets, and other public buildings. Look in store and restaurant windows for help wanted signs.
- Network ! Tell your friend, relative, Neighbors, teacher, and everybody else you know that you' are looking for a job. Describe the kind of job you want. One of these people might know about a job opening, maybe even before the job listing is in the newspaper.
- The internet has employment websites with thousand of job listing. You can look through the job listing in internet job banks, and you can even apply for some jobs online. If you don't have a computer or internet service at home, go to your local public library to get on the internet.
- Don't be afraid to call a compgny to ask about job opening. « Cold calls » are a good way to learn about job opportunities.
- Go to job fairs. Companies that are hiring often send the representatives to these events. At a job fair, you can learn about many different jobs and companies.
- If you have a special talent that you think a business can use, talk to the manager you might be able to create a job for yourself.
