SUJET DU CONCOURS D'ENTREE A L'ENETP

Epreuve d'Anglais

Durée: 2h

Text: TOURISM

Over the last 15 years, Mali has developed into a spectacular successful tourist destination. According to the World Tourism Organization (2006), the number of international arrivals increased from 40,000 between 1990 and 2005. Most of the tourists visit the “Golden Triangle” of Timbuktu-Djenné-Dogon Country (also known as “Cliff of Bandiagara – Land of the Dogon”), three World Heritage Sites classified by UNESCO between 1988 and 1989, and seem to ignore other secondary destinations, such as the Hombori Mountains.

Located 750 km to the northeast of Bamako, this large mountain range reaches 1155 m at its peak, Mount Hombori.

Due to the high cliffs surrounding its summit plateau, Mount Hombori is home to unique unspoiled vegetation and fauna, which have been preserved from pasture and agriculture. More specifically, Mount Hombori houses several plants considered useful or medicinal which are now rare in, or have completely disappeared from, the Hombori region, thus representing a unique opportunity to conserve in vivo both those species and their associated knowledge. Furthermore, preliminary studies on the fauna of the Hombori area by Nusslé et al. (personal communication) show that several species of rare birds and bats are to be found in the cliff of the mountain, while the plateau is inhabited by a rich wildlife, possibly including some endemic amphibians and reptiles.
