Text: What is sustainable development?

Sustainable development is a set of decisions that improve the living conditions of the present without endangering resources for future generations. Development is not sustainable if we use all our resources today and leave nothing for the next generations. Sustainable development means growing together, encouraging solidarity and respect for the environment. To ensure sustainable development, we must work all together! Significant changes must take place to transform the world into a fair society.

The environment is tremendously important in this issue development. The environment is indispensable in the survival of mankind. However, the effects of man's actions on it seem to prove the opposite. Climate change is affecting the environment worldwide and in different manners. The protection of the environment of the environment must be part of our daily behaviour. A protected environment goes hand in hand with a fair society.

To achieve this goal, leaders must engage in the struggle. Furthermore, everyone should be able to give their opinion on topics that concern children and young people by analyzing and debating the world we dream of for future generations. Everyone can also take positive actions in their own lives, for example, respecting others and the planet.

Text: Text: Civilians, the forgotten victims

The effects of war are widely spread and can be long term or short term. Soldiers experience war differently than civilians, although either suffer in times of war, and women and children suffer unspeakable atrocities in particular. In the past decade, up to two million of those killed in armed conflicts were children. The widespread trauma caused by these atrocities and suffering of the civilian population is another aftermath of these conflicts, the following creates extensive emotional and psychological stress. Present-day internal wars generally take a larger toll on civilians than state wars. This is due to the increasing trend where combatants have made targeting civilians a strategic objective. A state conflict is an armed conflict that occurs with the use of armed force between two parties, of which one is the government of a state. "The three problems posed by intrastate conflict are the willingness of UN members, particularly the strongest member, to intervene; the structural ability of the UN to respond; and whether the traditional principles of peacekeeping should be applied to intra-state conflict". Effects of war also include mass destruction of cities and have long lasting effects on a country's economy. Armed conflicts have important indirect negative consequences on infrastructure, public health provision, and social order. These indirect consequences are often overlooked and appreciated.
